

STREET CARS ARE TIED UP AGAIN

Failure of Power Interferes
With Traffic.
CAUSE REMAINS A MYSTERY
NEW SCHEDULE GOES INTO EFFECT.

At 10:58 o'clock yesterday forenoon the entire street car system of the city was tied up for lack of electric current and not until 12 o'clock noon was the current turned on. Ten minutes later another stop occurred and this lasted for ten minutes, making a total of almost continuous interruption of all street car traffic in the city of an hour and two minutes in the middle of the day.

Yesterday morning the new schedule under which the street cars are to be run went into effect, and by many the tie-up was believed to be attributable to the failure of the new method to produce practical results. From investigation it would appear that this was not the cause of the trouble, and that the cause lay in a suspension of electrical current.

With six generating plants, four water and two steam, the average patron of the street car system is at a loss to understand why a delay of more than half an hour should occur from a simple short circuit on one of the feed systems.

Cause of Trouble a Mystery.
After an exhaustive investigation by those in charge of the central station in the city it was concluded that a short circuit on the line from Ogden was the cause, but as to this there appears to have been no certainty, for an official connected exclusively with the operation of the street cars stated positively that the trouble was caused by the blowing out of one of the large dynamos in the central station. Inquiry at the central station brought out the statement that this was without foundation and that every dynamo was in serviceable condition. There was a suspension of power but the cause had not been ascertained by the management. The management has a satisfactory explanation been offered as to the delay ensuing from the failure of one source when there were five others to draw on.

As a result of the failure the steam plant at the central station and one at the old power house were both brought into commission and it is probable that the management will remain so until the management finds what the trouble is.

Schedule Causes Confusion.

The new street car schedule that went into effect yesterday morning affects only four runs in the city, and while simple, seems to have caused considerable confusion in the start among the conductors and motormen, and even among the timekeepers and assistant superintendents. A passenger on a South Temple street car in the forenoon asked the conductor if the car would go east on Seventh South per the old schedule or if the new schedule, which would send it to the old South, would be in effect. His reply was entirely indefinite and was to the effect that he had heard of the new schedule, but had not been instructed in regard to it, and that until he got to Main and First South and saw the timekeeper he didn't know where he would go. "Might go to the barn for all I know."

It was evident that while the schedule worked out by the officials was entirely practical for the purpose intended, to eliminate the confusion in the operation, the men were rather vague as to the intentions of the officials. Following are the changes:

The sixth street car, which formerly ran east on Fourth South street, will now run, one car to the Salt Palace and one south on West Temple. The service on Sixth street is scheduled for one car every fifteen minutes, and from Second South one car to the Salt Palace and one south on West Temple every thirty minutes.

The first street car, which formerly split to the Salt Palace and West Temple street, will now turn at the Dooly block corner and return on the same route, the route to the Salt Palace and West Temple being provided for by the Sixth street car.

The Ashton avenue car, which formerly ran to Eagle Gate and there turned, will now run on First South street to State, and from there will begin its return to Sugar ward.

Change on Prison Line.
The most radical change in the new schedule is in the prison car. Instead of going east on Seventh South street, as heretofore, this car will start its run at Thirteenth East street and come west on South Temple street; on Main street it will run south to Fourth South street, and will continue east on South Temple street, where it will take up the line of the old prison car to the prison. This will make the long run in the city, and it is predicted will cut into the time of the old "Seeing Salt Lake City" car.

The service to the prison will be one car each twenty minutes. Each alternate car will turn at the Knutsford corner, which will furnish a ten-minute service from Thirteenth East street to the Knutsford. There is also to be an added service morning and evening on East Fourth South street, and on the Sixth street line extra cars are to be run at night.

The proposition was that the Utah Sugar company would build a sugar factory in Sanpete or Sevier county this year. CLERICS AT THE QUIRINAL.
First-Time in the History of United Italy.

Rome, Jan. 1.—For the first time in the history of united Italy clerical aldermen were among the officials who went to the quirinal today to extend New Year's greetings to King Victor Emmanuel. It is reported that the clerical aldermen had consulted Pope Pius X. as to their attending the king's reception and were asked if they should do their duty as royal subjects.

Among the many subjects discussed at the quirinal was the king's reception and the situation at Port Arthur.

After the reception the officials were received by the Dowager Queen Margherita, who, conversing with Deputy Favia, spoke of the St. Louis exposition and said she regretted that she had been unable to visit the fair, as she had wished to do, adding:

"America is a most interesting country."

TAKES A NEW TACK.
San Francisco, Jan. 1.—Edna Wallace Hopper, through her attorney, has taken the first step toward having the contest over the will of the late Alexander Dunsinuir transferred from the British Columbia courts to the superior court and move that the decree of May 19, 1900, admitting the will of the late Alexander Dunsinuir to probate on letters of administration of James Dunsinuir be declared void on the grounds that the court was without jurisdiction to grant that decree.

Luck of a Man Who Couldn't Play.
(New York Sun.)

"Poker players of long experience generally declare that skill manipulation of the pasteboards is the only sure system of winning, but my experience does not lead me to think that way. I have said an old card player to some lovers of the national game lounging on easy leather chairs in a room where the air was warm and the one card draw to the left in the soft light of a lamp."

"What do you think he held after the four-card draw? Well, I will tell you all about it. It is the truth, though it sounds like a pipe dream."

"A party of five of us were playing our usual morning game of poker and, of course, it was in the smoking cabin of an ocean liner. It was at the soft mark, rich California deal that this wonderful play came off."

"He had proved himself dead easy to the rest of us, and we naturally doubted the existence of any such thing as luck when up against such a sure thing as science. Of course, his deal was perfect, for he couldn't scatter corn scientifically among a flock of chickens, so that the coast wouldn't get more than his share."

"He had finished his clumsily dealt five cards to each, he turned his cards so that I couldn't help getting a glimpse of them. I saw four queens starting benignly at him, one after another. First came the two black ones, then came the two red ones."

"Now, that isn't all the story. He was so stupefied at the strength of this honesty dealt hand that I instantly laid down my three kings and two jacks. That was a pretty heavy hand to hold in most cases, but just this time he did look high. I didn't bet a cent on it, for a big roll doesn't amount to much when it runs against four queens."

"When it came his say he dealt himself four aces, instead of one, and threw the four queens into the discard and snortingly managed to possess myself of the king full I had so wisely discarded."

"He picked up his four aces, and, glancing at them unceasingly, showed in a wad of bills that he had placed in front of him this looked like a dozen or two nuts for me. I went him for all that I had, amounting to several hundreds of dollars. It was a no limit game and everything went that could be produced in sight."

"I win? No! I did not. He had drawn four cards to an ace. There were three more aces among them."

Just then one of the listeners rose from his chair:

"I am somewhat of a liar myself," he said, as he left the group of card players behind him.

Eggs as Food.
(Medical Talk.)

Almost everybody eats eggs. There is perhaps no article of diet that is more common to all countries.

Eggs are used more than any other kind, although some people eat duck eggs, goose eggs and even turkey eggs. Turkey eggs are not so often eaten; they are generally kept for hatching.

Eggs are said to be a perfect food, the same as milk—that is, containing all the elements necessary for the growth and maintenance of the young chick, just as milk does for the young animal. While it is true that eggs contain all the elements necessary for the growth and maintenance of the young chick, yet it would not follow that these elements are in the right proportion for the sole nourishment of a person. That eggs are a splendid food is not to be questioned, but eggs alone would furnish sufficient diet for a grown person is hardly probable.

Eggs consist of protein, fat, water and mineral matter. It is protein or nitrogenous matter that builds and repairs the tissues of the body, while the fat supplies energy. The white of an egg is often said to be pure albumen, but it also contains phosphoric acid and sodium chloride or common salt. The yolk contains fatty matter, phosphorus, calcium, magnesium, potassium and iron. Eggs also contain sulphur and this probably accounts for the dark streaks by eggs on silver, the sulphur coming in contact with the silver forms silver sulphide.

Eggs are very easily digested. Raw eggs are more quickly digested than cooked eggs. Soft boiled or poached eggs are more easily digested than fried or hard boiled eggs. It takes about half an hour to digest a raw egg and a half to two hours. Soft boiled and roasted eggs require from two to three hours. Eggs must be allowed from three to four hours for digestion.

Eggs furnish a good substitute for meat and we believe it would be far better for the average person if eggs were more frequently used in place of meat. Especially do they make a light, nutritious diet for breakfast instead of the usual bacon or ham or sausage.
